Iran Earthquake Toll to Be High; Hundreds Are Buried in Single Village

TEHRAN, Iran (UP) — The governor of Hamadan province telegraphed today that earthquakes buried 1,100 persons in a single village and that the toll still was rising among homeless survivors caught in a sub-zero freeze.

The disaster report came from Farsanj, one of dozens of northwest Iranian settlements rocked by violent earth tremors before dawn Friday.

It said 200 bodies had been recovered from Farsanj so far.

Another 250 persons were estimated dead in other areas but communications were so shattered no accurate toll could be assembled.

The governor of Hamadan telegraphed that Farsanj was leveled —a field of tumbled masonry and wood where several thousand farmers and villagers had lived.

Relief Far Away

Relief was far away for survivors suffering in the bitter cold of the lonely hill country stretching between the capital and Iran's frontier with Iraq and Turkey.

The British Air attache here, Group Capt. J. M. Pelly - Fry, surveyed the disaster zone from an embassy plane.

Two Iranian Air Force planes airlifted tents, blankets and medical supplies into Kermanshah Province.

It was a race against Death's second assault in the form of exposure to the cold and a blanket of snow which covered the shattered area.

Casualty reports were arriving here in such numbers that the Red Lion and Sun Society — Iran's national Red Cross — refused to estimate a toll. It said only the total would be "considerable."

Troops To Rescue

Troops moved into the nearest of the stricken villages as far as possible with picks and shovels to dig out the injured and succor the living with food, shelter and medical treatment.

Bahasbab village reported 75 killed, Soltanataher 4, Chetabalah 36 and Kalbi 22.

British Ambassador Sir Rogers Stevens called on Foreign Minister Ali Gholi Ardelan this morning to express Britain's sympathy and offer aid.

Tremors still were being felt in the area today.

SCRAP 40-HOUR WEEK? — No, UAW President Walter Reuther tells the AFL-CIO convention in Atlantic City, N. J., "Longer hours must first be worked in Washington before . . . Liquor Board Official Can't Rent to State

HARRISBURG (UP)—The state Justice Department has ruled that an official of the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board cannot rent a liquor store building to the Commonwealth.

The decision, under the state "conflict of interest" legislation, terminates a renting arrangement of nearly 24 years on a building in Pittsburgh owned by Phil W. Gundelfinger, Coraopolis. Gundelfinger is a $9,454 a year district superintendent of state liquor stores in western Pennsylvania.

The building, at 340-34[illegible] Blvd. of the Allies, was rented to the state for $13,200 annually. The original lease was signed in 1934 when Gundelfinger joined the board as a civil service employe.

The Justice Department said the lease would be terminated Dec. 31. The current three-year agreement would expire next Jan. 1. The conflict of interest law passed by the 1957 Legislature holds that a state employe may not have an adverse interest in any contract with the state agency by which he is employed.

Leader 'Doubts' Six-day School Week is Answer

HARRISBURG (UP) — Gov. George M. Leader said today that he "doubts" that a six-day school week would be the answer to any decision to lengthen the school term in Pennsylvania.

Leader emphasized that the conference of educators he has called for Jan. 28-29 would concern itself mainly with examining means of improving the quality of instruction in the state's public schools.

He termed it a "misunderstanding" that the major topic of discussion at the conclave would be extension of the school term and establishment of a six-day school week.

"Quite possibly this matter may be discussed, but only in relation to the problem of improving the entire instructional program of the schools," Leader said.

"If it is agreed that the school term is to be lengthened, I personally would very much doubt that it would be done by instituting a six-day school week."

Loser Taking Recount Lead In Monongahela

Things are looking up for the Republican candidate for Council in Monongahela, but the decision won't be final until early next week.

Three of the four ballot boxes petitioned for a recount in the River City were opened yesterday and with only one box to go, Republican Louis S. Warren held a commanding lead over Democrat William Pellegrini.

This, despite the fact that Pellegrini apparently won the election when the return board figures gave him a two vote margin, 1240-1238.

After the ballot boxes from the first precinct of the second ward and the second precinct of the third ward had been opened, however, Warren had picked up 10 votes and led by eight.

The final box opened by Attorney George Modrak and his committee was the second precinct of the first ward.

Pellegrini dropped 25 votes. Warren picked up three.

Salvage Team Begins Search For Bodies of District Men

ST. MARYS' Ga. (UP) — A salvage team began a grim search today for the bodies of two Pittsburgh men believed to be buried in the wreckage of a plane that crashed in a marshland six days ago.

Two bodies were removed from the wreckage Friday.

The victims were identified as Louis Kuchinie of Finleyville, Pa., and George P. Airhart of Pittsburgh.

Authorities reported the two young men, both in their 20's, were among four persons on the plane returning from a football game in Miami last weekend.

The bodies believed to be still in the wreckage were identified by information from Pittsburgh to local authorities as Henry McCrory and John O'Hara, both of Pittsburgh.

A crab fisherman reported sighting a piece of wreckage showing above water near the edge of a vast stretch of marsh grass Thursday. Most of the plane was buried in the marshland.

Await Low Tide

Sheriff Willie E. Smith said a team of 15 salvagers had to await low tide today to dig for the two bodies, after they were overtaken by rising water Friday.

The sheriff said the crew planned to pump out a hole dug around the partially buried wreckage.

Police Chief E. F. Geiger said St. Marys residents heard a "kind of a thundering noise Sunday" but that no wreckage was found until Thursday. St. Marys is about 11 miles north of the Florida line.

Geiger said the plane apparently lost a wing while in flight. He said the wing was found a mile from the main wreckage. Pittsburgh authorities reported a four-seater plane was overdue earlier this week.

"If this was the plane they are looking for, it was supposed to have been carrying people who had been to Miami for last Saturday's football game between Pittsburgh and Miami," the chief said.

The two bodies recovered Friday were taken to a funeral home in Kingsland, Ga.

Soviet Challenge Will Be Met, President Says

PARIS (UP) — President Eisenhower stepped briskly off his plane today for the NATO summit conference and said he believed the Atlantic Pact nations would meet the challenge of Russia "effectively" and "in unity."

The President's plane landed at Orly Field at 2:53 p. m. (8:53 a. m. est) and he came down the plane's gangplank at 3 p.m., right on schedule.

The President stood at attention while the United States and the French national anthems were played and then inspected the French guard of honor that met his plane.

French Premier Felix Gaillard greeted Eisenhower with a formal welcoming address.

The President then delivered a formal statement in a voice that was firm and clear.

The President said he believed the 15-member NATO nations were meeting in Paris to analyze the challenge of Russia and to meet it effectively.

"It is for us, together, to determine whether man will continue to live in freedom and in dignity or whether they are to become mere vassals of an all - powerful state," Eisenhower said.

"We all know that fear alone has neither the power nor the nobility to fulfill the ultimate destinity of the Atlantic community," he said.

Eisenhower said that in the forth coming meeting of the NATO heads of states:

"We shall be striving not only to strengthen the NATO shield but we shall also address ourselves to other aspects of our alliance."

War Of Nerves

Moscow, meantime, maintained its stepped - up "war of nerves" barrage against the West European states. Radio Moscow today quoted the official Soviet newspaper Red Star as saying "large scale military operations in Europe with the use of nuclear weapons would convert Europe into a huge atomic cemetery and cause the death of millions of civilians."

The Soviet Army newspaper asserted NATO strategists "regard Europe as the main battlefield in the future war against the Soviet Union."

Eisenhower arrived in Paris for the NATO summit conference, opening Monday, after an overnight flight from Washington. Planes and ships patrolled the route of his personal plane, the "Columbine III," to guard against any eventuality.

Flanked by some of his chief advisers, Eisenhower told waiting dignitaries at Orly Airport he was confident "that in the supreme strength of balanced unity we can now move together towards security and peace."

Observers said this phrase underlined Eisenhower's reasons for coming to Paris. He hoped that out of the three-day meeting would come greater self - confidence in NATO and the possibility of peaceable relations with the Soviet Union.

Eisenhower said the chiefs of state of the 15-member NATO nations were meeting "in this beau-

Santa Claus in Blue Suit Makes Youngster Happy

CHICAGO (UP)—Santa Claus arrived too early, in the wrong-colored suit and on an unlucky day, but Katherine Brown, 4, isn't complaining.

For two years Kathy has made recurrent pleas to parents and friends that she wanted a kitten. But until Friday, "unlucky" Friday the 13th, Kathy went without one.

However, she had met a boy, Brian Soncrant, 7, of Birmingham, Mich., during a summer vacation. Like the rest of Kathy's friends, Brian remembered how much she wanted a junior-size cat.

He wrote a letter to Chicago Police Commissioner Timothy J. O'Connor asking for help. He enclosed four half dollars and three one dollar bills.

He told O'Connor it would cost him too much to buy a kitten in Michigan and send it by "frait (sic) from here." He asked if a nice policeman would buy a kitten "that purrs, with a red ribbon and a bell on its neck."

Policeman James B. Palets was assigned the task, and he found a kitten suitable for Kathy. With assistance from friends, he got a red ribbon and tied a bell around the kitten's neck.

The blue-suited Palets might not look much like Santa Claus, but no one today heard any complaints from Kathy.

To complete the Christmas gesture, Palets returned Brian's five dollars.

Citrus Freeze Damage High

By UNITED PRESS

The Florida Citrus Commission was to meet in emergency session today to estimate freeze damage to the 300 million dollar citrus crop frosted in a Dixie cold snap.

Forecasters for today, however, were for warmer weather over the southern portion of the United States. Only the fog - bound Central California Valley, the snow-whipped Northeast and the rain-spattered West Coast were left out of the general forecast for warmer temperatures and clearing skies.

Most of the nation enjoyed fine weather Friday because a huge high pressure area had settled over America. A weak low pressure area brought snow flurries to the Northern Great Lakes region and eastward through New England.

Cool air sweeping in from the Pacific brought rain to Washington and Oregon and held the fog-producing low pressure center over the Central California Valley.

The weather bureau said temperatures rose highest Friday in the area between the Mississippi river and the Atlantic Coast. The increase was from 10 to 20 degrees over Thursday's readings.

In Florida, it was feared at least

Prisoner Breaks City Jail During Night

Monessen police today are on the lookout for elusive William Frezzell, 18, of No. 2 Castle Gardens, who broke out of the city jail last night.

It marked the second time this month he broke away from the law.

Here is Chief of Police Michael Kuvinka's lengthy report on Frezzell's dealings with the law this month:

On Dec. 4, he was taken by Constable John Bender for a hearing before Alderman Marion Reamer on assault and battery charges. During the hearing, Frezzell ran out of the office and disappeared.

He was finally located Thursday and placed in jail.

Last night he was given a hearing before acting Mayor John Kotch Jr., who fined him $200 and costs or 30 days in jail on numerous malicious mischief charges.

The malicious mischief charges ranged from turning in false fire alarms to ordering taxi cabs for persons who didn't need them. He also was charged with creating distrubances at the home of relatives.

Lacking money, Frezzell was placed in jail. Then really became mischievous. He ripped out bunks, toilet fixtures and banged the steel cell doors so loudly that the noise was heard over the din of carpenters working in the station.

Desk Sergeant E.A. Leinbach went to investigate. As he opened the cell door, Frezzell slipped out faster than a rabbit and again disappeared through a nearby alley.

A jail break charge has been added to his list of charges.

He must also pay for the $200 damage done to the jail.

Bond Refused For Woman in Franklin Case

FRANKLIN, Pa. (UP) — A 21-year-old Filipino woman who shot her Air Force husband to death after he asked for a divorce to marry a British girl remained in jail today following refusal by the court to grant her bail.

Counsel for Mrs. Lydia Dean had sought her release on bond. Venango County Court Judge Leo T. McCracken turned down the request Friday.

McCracken cited provisions of the state Constitution which exempts from bond cases where proof is evident warranting a presumption of guilt.

Mrs. Dean, mother of a -year-old girl, is being held in connection with the shooting of T-Sgt. Ronald Dean, 25, last Saturday.

Mrs. Dean talked with her mother, Mrs. Eugenia Deen (correct) by overseas telephone Friday from Baguio, the Philippines. The mother said she would fly here around Christmas to be at her daughter's side.

Meanwhile, the Baguio Bar Assn. opened a "Lydia Fund Drive" which was expected to spread throughout the country. Attorney Jose E. Cristobal, secretary of the association, told United Press his group will underwrite the expense of a Filipino attorney to accompany Mrs. Deen to the United States to assist in Lydia's defense.

Mrs. Deen gave up plans to take a lawyer to the U.S. after the American Air Force rejected her request to fly to her daughter's side aboard a U.S. Air Force plane.

The Air Force did, however, offer to help expedite the issuance of a visa for her.

Mrs. Deen said she had written to her daughter's American lawyer, Gerald McGill, expressing her gratitude for launching the fund raising campaign.

Mrs. Dean's neighbors from the village of Pleasantville, where she lived while her husband was on duty in England, have hired an attorney to defend her. And a "Lydia Dean fund," inagurated by neighbors, has collected $500.

Mrs. Dean's daughter, Phyllis, has been placed in custody of neighbors pending outcome of the case. Mrs. Deen said in Baguio that attorneys will fight for custody of the girl.

Mrs. Dean and her husband were married in a service chapel in the Philippines four years ago. When his tour of duty in that country was completed, Dean brought his bride to America.

When he returned from England after 17-months of duty, Mrs. Dean said, he asked her for a divorce so that he could marry a British girl, who is expecting his child.

Bell Is Speaker

Senator Urges Top Missile Brains Work

WASHINGTON (UP) — Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson said today that if America is going to catch Russia in the crucial rocket race the government's top missile brass must start working harder.

The Texas Democrat demanded "the same drive and energy at high levels that we have at the working levels" to help make up the "serious" lag in U.S. missile and satellite programs.

Johnson made the statements to reporters in advance of his Senate Preparedness Subcommittee's second day of current hearings into the nation's space weapons programs.

The government, meanwhile, went ahead with plans to fling more money and manpower into development of the Atlas Intercontinental Ballistic Missile (ICBM).

The much-demanded speedup came as Lt. Gen. James Gavin, Army chief of Research and Development, disclosed that he and a "sizeable portion" of Army officers believe Russia has replaced the United States as the world's foremost military power.

The subcommittee called as a witness today the Army's Dr. Wernher von Braun, former German rocket expert now applying his talents in behalf of this country. Von Braun has become the center of a political controversy over whether Democrats or Republicans are to blame for falling behind in the missile race.

Also slated to testify were Maj. Gen. John B. Medaris, head of the Army's Huntsville, Ala., missile center, and Navy Secretary Thomas S. Gates Jr.

Johnson said his group's missile investigation left no doubt "we are behind and it is serious." But he said "we can catch up if we get at the job."

U.S. government and military officials have conceded that the Soviets may be ahead in certain military fields, especially rockets, but Gavin is the first to assert flat they have taken an overall lead.

half the crop had suffered "severely." One estimate said about 25 million dollars worth of vegetables withered in the two - day cold snap Thursday and Friday in the northern part of the state.

Farmers south of Miami, however, reported most of their crops untouched by the freeze.

Homer Hooks, general manager of the Citrus Commission, said the freeze was the worst since Dec. 11, 1934.

'Snowflake Frolic' Held at School

About 300 students took part Thursday evening in the "Snowflake Frolic" the annual Christmas dance sponsored by the Monessen Junior High Student Council.

Miss Norma Maatta, sponsor of the council, helped to direct the affair, which took place in the Senior High gym. Music was furnished by records.

Space Projects Dispute Awaiting Secretary

WASHINGTON (UP) — The Air Force today put on ice its plans to establish a disputed space projects agency until Defense Secretary Neil H. McElroy returns from Europe.

Defense officials said McElroy, who is attending the NATO meeting in Paris next week, probably would straighten out a hassle over the agency which has flared between Pentagon brass and the Air Force.

Air Force Secretary James H. Douglas Friday set aside the order that started the jurisdictional battle over space.

He said the order was issued "prematurely" last Tuesday as the "result of a misunderstanding" between Air Force officers and defense officials.

Douglas said he had assured the Defense Department that no action would be taken to establish the contemplated "Directorate of Aeronautics" until it could be coordinated with the specific plans for a new space agency in the Department of Defense.

Douglas acted shortly after William M. Holaday, Defense Department missiles chief, told the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee that the Air Force may have been trying to "grab the limelight and establish a position" before the Defense Department set up an overall space agency.

Holaday said he had refused to approve an Air Force press release on establishment of the office.

Deputy Defense Secretary Donald A. Quarles revealed Thursday that he had asked the Air Force to hold up establishing the office until the department set up its own agency for coordinating space research of all the armed forces.

But he said the Air Force went ahead anyway and set up the office in an order signed by Lt. Gen. Donald L. Putt, deputy Air Force chief of staff for development.

In suspending the order, Douglas made it plain that the Air Force office would be re-established once the Defense Department plans have been put into effect. He said the purpose of the new office would be to serve as "an Air Force contact" with the contemplated Defense Department Agency.

Before Douglas revoked the order, Air Force officials labeled the uproar over creation of the office a "tempest in a teapot."

tiful Paris to analyze the challenge we now face."

"We shall meet it effectively," he said. "We shall meet it in unity."

He said that when the NATO council began its deliberations he would be thinking of "France's greatest words — liberty, equality and brotherhood."

Then the President restated one of the basic principles of his administration—that the Western nations were seeking only their own security and "above all. . .peace with justice and with honor."

Praise For France

Most of his remarks were devoted to praise for France.

France, he said, "was one of the first to have the imagination and courage and wisdom which led to the founding of the defensive shield we know as NATO."

"She recognized that only in true partnership could the free nations develop and maintain the spiritual, economic and military strength needed to neutralize the despotic and continuing threat from the east," Eisenhower said.

The Columbine made a brief stopover at Loring Air Force Base in Maine for refueling before taking off for the nearly 4,000 mile transatlantic flight. Storms which lashed the North Atlantic this week have abated and good flying conditions were reported.

A "safety" armada of American and British warships patrolled the waters along the route of the presidential plane, prepared to race to the assistance in the event of a ditching.

The exact route of the Columbine III was secret.

Coty Greets Ike

The official greeting party was headed by President Rene Coty of France.

Eisenhower is the first American president to visit Paris since Woodrow Wilson came for the Versailles Peace Treaty in 1919.

It is Eisenhower's second trip to Europe since he became president in 1952. He flew to Geneva, Switzerland, in 1955 for the abortive Big Four "summit" conference.

Western diplomats agree NATO is faced with the gravest crisis in the eight-year-history of the anti-Communist alliance.

These were some of the critical issues Eisenhower faced:

—Russia's Sputnik triumphs and the failure of the U.S. Vanguard satellite test have badly shaken European confidence in the United States as the leader of the alliance.

—Despite repeated warnings, many NATO countries are dragging their heels on NATO commitments or are simply not trying to meet them.

—France, West Germany and several smaller members are reluctant to allow American missile-launching bases on their territories in fear of Soviet reprisals. All nevertheless are agreed that missiles must be used in the common defense.

—European members want control over nuclear warheads stocked on their territories. There is strong insistence that each nation have an equal say with the United States in deciding if and when to trigger these missiles.

Member States Squabbling

There are differences too between the various member states. Britain and West Germany are squabbling over support payments for the British Rhine Army. Greece is at odds with Britain and Turkey over the Cyprus issue. The French are still miffed at the U.S. and Britain because of the arms shipments to Tunisia.

The West Europeans frankly looked to Eisenhower to get NATO back on the rails, even though they acknowledge the three-day meeting could not possibly provide all or even most of the answers to their problems.

Labor Demands Voice In Indonesian Affair

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UP) — Indonesian labor unions today demanded a voice in the operation of Dutch Enterprises which came under blanket military control Friday night.

In several areas the unions—not all of them Communist—demanded representation on supervisory teams which are directing the operations of the Dutch businesses. Generally these teams include only members from the military, the agricultural service and the labor service.

So far, no response to the demands had been made public.

Maj. Gen. Abdul Haris Nasution Army chief of Staff, issued nationwide instructions to military commanders Friday night telling them to place all Dutch interests in Indonesia under their control.

Estimates of Dutch holdings in Indonesia range up to 1½ billion dollars.

While this order broadened and solidified the government's grasp over Dutch Enterprises, it also served as a clear cut warning to "individuals and organizations" to stop seizing property.

President Sukarno continued to preside at National Council sessions this morning. A cabinet session was held Friday night but all that could be learned was that it defined Indonesian territorial waters.

There also was reaffirmation that Sukarno's health required him to take a rest but there were no details as to where or when he would go.

Antar news agency today published an interview from Peiping with Chou En Lai quoting the Communist Chinese leader as saying that if Indonesia needs help from the Peoples Republic of China it could get it through diplomatic channels.

It also was reported by Antara that a supply of hand grenades, firearms and ammunition was seized in a sweep on a "house suspected to be the secret headquarters of a plot."

Quadruplets Born To British Mother

LONDON (UP) — Mrs. Mary Bennett gave birth today to quadruplets — the first in this country since the announcement that a special bounty for multiple births established by Queen Victoria has been ended.

The quads — two boys and two girls — were born at the East End Maternity Hospital. Each weighed over four pounds.

Mother and all four babies were reported doing well.

The quads' father, William is a dock laborer. The Bennetts have three other children, a boy and a set of twins — boy and girl.

Seek Damages For Fatality

A claim for more than $5,000 on two counts for the death of Gervacio Gutierrez, also known as Albert Garcia, has been filed by Ida Garcia, 102 Meldon Ave., Donora in the Washington County courts.

The suit was filed against Theodore Kaczmarek, 1225 McKean Ave., Donora.

The alleged accident occured at about 1:30 a. m., Jan. 27, 1957 on Route 18, in Slovan.

It is alleged that the Kaczmarek car collided with another machine, and that Garcia, a passenger in the Kaczmarek car was fatally injured.

Transit Dispute In New York May End Soon

NEW YORK (UP)— An apparent rift in the ranks of striking motormen and plans by the Transit Authority to train 600 new motormen to break the six-day-old strike on the city's subway system spurred hopes today the transit tieup would end quickly.

Dissension in the ranks of the striking Motormens' Benevolent Association (MBA) festered into an open clash Friday night between two MBA lawyers at a strategy meeting of the splinter union.

Moss K. Schenck, an attorney for the union, said the four jailed strike leaders, including MBA President Theodore Loos, had repudiated a peace formula presented to Mayor Robert F. Wagner by Louis Waldman in an effort to settle the dispute.

Waldman, another attorney for the strikers and author of the settlement terms, branded Schenck's statement a "complete sellout." He called the charge so "intrinsically mischievous and untrue that it carries its own condemnation."

Waldman counter-charged that Schenck had joined forces with the giant Transport Workers Union and the Transit Authority "in opposition to a fair settlement of the strike."

Suggestions for Better Education

GOV. GEORGE Leader and Dr. Charles H. Boehm, superintendent of public instruction in the Governor's cabinet, have made some provocative suggestions concerning Pennsylvania's public school system which seem likely to stimulate interesting and perhaps fruitful discussion among the state's educators.

The suggestion which produced the most immediate reaction is that the length of the school year might be increased either by having classes six days a week instead of five or by extending classes through June and part of July.

In support of this idea Dr. Boehm observed: "We could extend the school year gradually and achieve the same number of hours in 11 years that we now have in 12 and still preserve August and a large part of July for vacations."

We have our doubts as to whether this idea was carefully thought through by either Dr. Boehm or the Governor before it was given to the press.

It seems apparent to many who have studied the matter that the main problem in public education in most localities is qualitative in nature and not quantitative. A child who is attending an inferior school and receiving instruction from a poorly trained teacher or a teacher who has too many pupils in his classes is not likely to benefit very much from another day of such instruction each week. What he needs is a proper school and a competent teacher or one who has the time to do a satisfactory job.

It may be that further study will show that the six-day week has merit. Certainly there is nothing sacred about the 180-day school year which has been the standard in Pennsylvania for some years.

But we cannot see that a mere lengthening of the school year can make a contribution to the improvement of the quality of work by either pupils or teachers.

GOVERNOR Leader has called a conference of 100 educators to meet in Harrisburg next month for an examination of the state's school system.

"I intend," he says, "to ask this conference to reappraise the entire instructional program . . . placing special emphasis on science and mathematics, but also on the important areas of English, social studies, pupil guidance and extension education."

We think this is a constructive move on the Governor's part, and we hope it will lead to a thoroughgoing inquiry. The leaders of education and citizens generally should not hesitate to question any of our educational practices, no no matter how well entrenched they have become by custom and habit or even by law.

The great need — and it is a national need — is for better teaching and more serious and eager students at all levels. Whatever steps are directed to meeting this need should have public support and encouragement.

Worth the Trouble

AS THE busiest days of the pre-Christmas shopping season complicate the difficulties of Monessen's downtown traffic situation, it is important that we have a maximum of cooperation and understanding — and also patience — among the public, the city officials and stores.

Traffic congestion is irritating and sometimes costly. It calls for intelligent corrective action by public officials. But where it is unavoidable, as is the case with much of the present congestion in Monessen, the best remedy is good-natured patience on all sides.

We have to remember, after all, that the basic cause of the present difficulty is a fine improvement project, the widening and repaving of a large portion of Schoonmaker Ave. This improvement is much needed and, when completed, will be much enjoyed both by local residents and by visitors to the city.

Such improvements are worth some inconvenience. Of course, efforts should be made to limit the inconvenience and our city officials have been doing a generally good job in that respect.

The rest of us can help most by being patient.

Rep. Hi Andrews, the veteran Democrat in the legislature, thinks kids ought to go to school longer to keep them out of trouble. The same argument might be made for longer sessions of the legislature.

Something has finally been discovered to silence the chambers of commerce in Florida —three days of temperatures in the 20s.

NATO a Hard Test For President

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON (UP)— It probably is appropriate, even though by chance, that President Eisenhower is taking off for Paris on Friday the thirteenth, the unlucky day of the black cat.

Mr. Wilson

Few statesmen have undertaken a major mission under less promising circumstances. The mission, of course, is to breathe some fire and life into the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

NATO is the defensive alliance of the free West against Communism. It is an uneasy alliance which from time to time strips its gears when the conflicting interests of member nations seem to require that NATO proceed forward and backward at the same time.

Dulles Believed Liability

Chief aide to Eisenhower in Paris will be Secretary of State John Foster Dulles. American correspondents in Europe and some of the native talent there have been reporting with remarkable unanimity that Dulles will be a severe liability, the monkey on the President's back.

Moreover, the consensus seems to be that three factors will greatly diminish President Eisenhower's prestige in Paris and this is important. The whole idea of the meeting of the NATO chiefs of state was to rub off onto that organization some of the prestige attaching to the United States and to Eisenhower.

The unfortunate factors are these:

—Missiles, satellites and sputniks.

—The President's health.

—The fact that his political future is behind him.

Third Term Out

Eisenhower's political future is behind him by reason of the 22nd Amendment which forbids a third term. Democratic control of Congress and Democratic refusal to share in responsibility for the outcome of the Paris meeting further weaken Eisenhower as spokesman and negotiator for the United States.

For Eisenhower the Paris prospect is a tough one and, maybe, that is just as well. The NATO experience can be no more than a warm-up for what awaits the President after the Congress reassembles here next month. Likely, it will be necessary then to go back to the Hoover administration for an example of what a rip-snorting opposition Congress can do to a President who, obviously, is serving his final term and whose party is divided, resentful and in no mood to give him any real defense.

Hard Winter Ahead

The upcoming second session of the 85th Congress is going to be a daisy. The President is stuck for another year, at least, with a big spending budget and no chance for tax relief. Worse, politically, he is committed to an attempt to hold the spending line by substantial reductions in the welfare state and pressure group subsidy categories.

As the shape of administration policies for 1958 takes form, there is not much visible likely to fire Republicans with the old party spirit. On the contrary, they will be asked to huzzah for a relatively soft administration line on big labor, to cheer for farm policies which have proved rather unpopular, so far, and to support foreign and defense policies which are not widely applauded.

For Mr. E, it promises to be a hard winter.

Enrico Caruso Is Subject of Picture Study

By UNITED PRESS

Surely Enrico Caruso was among the most photogenic of human beings. The proof is in "Caruso—His Life in Pictures" (Studio Crowell) which with hundreds of pictures, personal and professional, formal and informal, re-create not only the career of the greatest tenor the world has known so far, but the personality and character of the man.

The assembler of this remarkable photographic record who also wrote the terse text (not many words are needed when you have such pictures as these) and the explanatory captions, is Francis Robinson, assistant manager of The Metropolitan Opera, who, over the years has made himself a leading authority on Caruso and his life and times.

Yet, as he states in an introduction, Robinson never heard Caruso sing. But in Robinson's intimate day-by-day association with the contemporary Metropolitan Opera, "there has not been a day I have not sensed Caruso's presence as though he were still a member of the company."

Ike Faces Duties as Soldier

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — Close friends of President Eisenhower say he has made up his mind to face the duties of president as a soldier on the firing line and die with his boots on, if necessary.

They say this was partly behind his decision to fly to Paris for the vital, though grueling meeting of NATO nations. Also a factor was his very quick recovery from the minor stroke suffered before Thanksgiving. The doctors who examined the President have confided to their professional colleagues that his recovery has been much more rapid than expected, though the chances of another stroke at his age are great.

Mr. Pearson

The President, though fully aware of this hazard, feels that he should proceed with the duties of the presidency. Hence the trip to Paris.

Whether he will endeavor to assume the full duties remains to be seen. Actually, he has been absent from the White House two full years out of his five years in office, most of it ill or vacationing. And even his close friends admit it is impossible to conduct the intricate, complicated affairs of the United States on a part-time basis.

If, however, President Eisenhower should swing into a full White House work load, they fear the results on his health might be serious.

At times in the past the President has given some indication that he might like to retire. But currently that thought seems to have been put aside. Certainly there will be no thought of retirement while the President is under criticism for our scientific defeats at the hands of Russia.

One of the most marked characteristics in Mr. Eisenhower's make-up is his desire to be liked. And he is not going to retire while under fire or when his popularity is in question. He would far rather pass out of office, like an old soldier, with his boots on. . .

"Satchmo" Behind the Curtain

It isn't generally known, but Louis "Satchmo" Armstrong is dying for a State Department invitation to blow his golden trumpet behind the Iron Curtain.

This is true despite Louis's blast at President Eisenhower during the Little Rock crisis that Ike was "two-faced" and "has no guts." At that time, "Satchmo" was so angry he wouldn't think of going to Soviet Russia for the U. S. Government.

Since Ike sent troops into Little Rock, all that is now forgotten.

"Don't get me wrong," Armstrong said recently. "What I'm against is all the head-whipping. But the situation is improving. And I love Eisenhower. I love that man.

"I'll say something else. My people have a better chance in the United States than any place in the world."

Now at a New York night club after a triumphant Latin American tour, "Satchmo" nourishes a compelling desire to make an Iron Curtain tour for Uncle Sam. He figures he could do a lot to erase Communist propaganda about the status of the Negro in America.

On his South American swing, Louis gave 67 concerts in five countries. He got $80,000, plus expenses, for a four-week appearance in Buenos Aires, was pictured on the front pages of leading newspapers everywhere he went. In Brazil he and his wife had lunch at the presidential mansion with President Kubitschek. Mobs were so big that in Chile the Armstrong entourage had to be protected at the airport by 250 police and 40 detectives.

That wasn't all. At a time when the Soviet sputniks were making the U. S. look silly on the front pages of newspapers all over the globe, "Satchmo" managed to get his picture on the covers of 22 Latin American magazines. American diplomats, realizing the timeliness of his tour, threw banquets for "Satchmo" in every capital he visited. In Venezuela Louis played at the home of President Jimnez.

But for the orphan boy from New Orleans, one desire remains: a tour behind the Iron Curtain.

Merry-Go-Round

The State Department has never offered to send Armstrong behind the Iron Curtain. The idea was merely in the talking stage when Louis issued his blast against Ike over Little Rock. All the State Department offered was to contribute some money to Satchmo's personal South American tour, provided he would extend it to out-of-the-way cities and pay part of the extra expense himself. . . Announcement by right-wing Sen. William Jenner (R., Ind.) that he won't seek re-election recalls an expression long popular with Indiana politicians. "You've heard of Bill Jenner," the saying goes, "but I'll bet you've never heard of a Jenner bill". . . Eddie Roddan, astute adviser to Jim Farley and ghost writer of the Farley book, is now master-minding ex-Sen. Bill Benton's plan to come back to the Senate from Connecticut. . . Douglas Dillon, the big Dillon, Read investment banker, has become so potent in the State Department that if Dulles should resign tomorrow, Eisenhower probably would pick him as the new Secretary of State. Chris Herter, ex-Governor of Massachusetts, now Undersecretary of State, is most unhappy about Dulles's lack of imagination. He won't admit it publicly, but he feels American policy is bogged down.

Polar Explorer Was A Promising Student

By HARRY R. PORE Jr.

Dr. Paul A. Siple returned from the Antarctic this week and on Thursday was presented with the Distinguished Civilian Service Award, the highest decoration the Army gives to civilians.

I read this news with more than ordinary interest as I suspect did many others who were students with Dr. Siple at Allegheny College about a generation ago.

Paul has made about five trips to the South Polar regions, beginning with the first of Admiral Byrd's expeditions in 1928. He was selected for that one in a competition entered by about 600,000 Boy Scouts, and he was only 19 at the time.

A resident of Erie, Paul entered Allegheny as a freshman with me in the fall of 1929. I remember him as a large and rather awkward lad. Aside from his size, his most noteworthy feature was a broad smile.

He was a quiet, serious boy and did not enter much into social and other campus activities. He would occasionally be seen in Boy Scout uniform, including short pants, as he was much in demand at Scout functions in the Meadville-Erie area. And this made him the butt of some joking among his classmates, sophisticated as only college freshmen can be.

Purposeful Boy

My largest memory of Paul Siple, however — and I do not think this is entirely conjured as a result of his success and prominence — is that of a boy who seemed always to be on his way somewhere and to be pretty sure of where he was going. I do not recall ever seeing him saunter.

Most often he would be headed for Alden Hall, the biology building, where he had a great and good friend in Prof. Chester A. Darling, chairman of the department. Dr. Darling, now retired and living in California, was a kind of salty version of Mr. Chips. He had that priceless knack in a teacher of drawing exceptional performance out of able students. He never drew anything out of me but a passing grade in Biology 1, which ended our professional relationship but was only the beginning of a friendship which I still value.

But Dr. Darling could take a boy like Paul Siple, touch a spark of interest and make it burn into a fire of unique achievement. Paul has more than once acknowledged publicly his great debt to our old teacher and friend.

Noted Scientist

Building on his boyhood experience with Byrd, Paul became a noted geographer, geologist, meteorologist and biologist. During World War II he was the Army's top expert on clothing and equipment for troops assigned to cold climates.

He married Ruth Johannesmeyer, a fine girl who was also at Allegheny with us, and their home is in Washington. But I read somewhere that about half of their married life Paul has spent in the company of penguins at the South Pole, a condition which Ruth has accepted, I'm sure, as her contribution — and a great one — to Paul's brilliant career.

Admiral Byrd was ailing and near death when the latest expedition, in conjunction with the International Geophysical Year, was being planned. And it was the Admiral's own recommendation that his old Boy Scout associate, Paul Siple, should be the scientific leader of the American group. He spent just over a year in Antarctica this time, and it can hardly be doubted that another fine contribution to human knowledge will be the result.

Schools and those who teach in them should be ever alert for such talents. They are not always easily discovered — some are hidden under bushels. And often they come in packages which are not outwardly promising.

But it is of such uncommon material that uncommon men like Paul Siple are made.

The Woman's View—

Christmas Tree Trade Is Booming in U. S.

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UP) — The Yuletide season shows that man can, too, make a tree.

He's producing trees by the millions in the form of Christmas decorations for home, office, store, bank and beauty shop.

The man-made ones are comparative newcomers to the Christmas tree tradition, which began in 1737 in Germany. But they get fancier each year. Prices range from $1.98 to $198, depending on size and amount of decoration. They range in height from 10 inches to 10 feet and the manufacturers pay little attention to nature's dictates in coloring them. This year, you can buy the trees in white, pale pink, pale blue, gold, silver, green, or in various combinations of colors.

Sales in Millions

Alfred Grieco, sales manager for Premier decorations, estimated retail sales now at five million dollars a year and predicted a steady increase.

"For a couple of good reasons," said Grieco. "They are flame retarded and they can be re-used."

H. J. Williams, an executive of Noma Lites, Inc., said there is a growing market for the artificial tree already decorated and ready to plug into the nearest socket. These electrically wired ones are good for at least five years, he said.

But Williams called the artificial tree market still just a small branch of overall sales; "no more than 3 per cent of all trees sold are artificial," he said.

We will decorate 30 million trees nature-made this year, the toy manufacturers of the U.S.A. predicted.

Most of the artificial trees are basically of a synthetic material called "visca," but that is only a start when some imaginative decorators cut loose. I've seen them decked with everything from sequined icicles to ermine tails.

Some manufacturers this year show half-trees, for the woman who wants to fit them on a mantlepiece. You can buy one for "Baby's first Christmas" also — a pink and blue number, with rattles and other small toys as decorations. Its base is a music box which plays a lullaby.

Pink Trees For Kids

Lord and Taylor, in New York, this season displayed a children's tree, 28 inches high, and colored in shades of pink and green. Ornaments are tiny, hand-carved dolls and doll house accessories.

The store also offered a 10-foot cellulose "fir" in various color combinations. One on display was green and white, with old-fashioned Christmas tree balls in gold, green and white. Price, $195.

"One woman came into the department, spotted the tree, and said she wanted it just as it was, bulbs and all," said a store official. "Her total bill was close to $275."

My own favorite tree isn't around this year. It was a small, ermine covered one with diamond and emerald jewelry draped around it, like popcorn strings. Tiffany's offered it last Christmas for one million dollars.

Cheerleaders 'Unveil' New Uniforms

Monessen High School's cheerleaders "unveiled" their new uniforms for the home fans last night and drew almost as many "wolf-calls" as they received when they raced onto the floor in the abbreviated skirts for the first time at Uniontown Tuesday . . . The new outfits are cute but certainly represent one extreme to the other, from the old uniforms being slacks, the new very, very short skirts . . . Rostraver Junior High will play the Charleroi Juniors a second time next week in a 10 o'clock morning contest, Friday, Dec. 20, the first game being set for next Monday . . . After the game the Charleroi teams will be the guests of the Little Leps at the annual Christmas Party in the cafeteria.

Grover was formerly Chicago Cubs property until the minor league draft action put him in the American League farm system . . . He's 6-5 now and weighs 220 He posted a pitching mark of 11-9 for Lafayette, Ill. in the Midwest League last season . . . When the Lafayette team disbanded late in the season Groven went to the Class C Twin Falls (Idaho) club . . . Bobo Tabbed Early as Future Star

Several years ago when James (Bobo) Aldrich, Monessen High's All-Big Five tackle, was a Midget Leaguer here . . . During one of the first games he played, Jack Kerr, mechanical foreman of this newspaper, and a former Midget League president was sitting with the late Rev. H. A. S. Cooke well-known Monessen sports follower . . . Kerr remarked to Rev. Cooke that "that Aldrich boy will make the Big Six team some day and go on to be a fine football college gridder." . . . As of now you are half-right, Jack, only Bobo can make it 100 per cent . . . Four West Virginia U. tackles won letters this past season and all are Pennsylvanians as are both letter-winning centers and at least one player at each of the other positions except end.

Usually about this time of year you'd be reading where the Pittsburgh Pirates' basketball team was looking for games with Dick Groat, Frank Thomas, Ron Kline and a couple of "helpers" like Monongahela's Ron Necciai on the roster . . . This year, however, Buc General Manager Joe L. Brown has said "no basketball" . . . . They will play one game though, a bentfit with the Steelers' cage team on Jan. 8 as a halftime feature of the Pitt vs. Westminster, Duquesne vs. Carnegie Tech twin bill . . . Another Top Performance by Prince

Bob Prince turned in another stellar performance at the annual Sports Writers' fete Wednesday night, the many guests we talked to (of the 1.000 attending) agreed he's the best in the "emcee" business . . . His stunt of pulling out a blank-loaded pistol when he said he was an Oklahoma grad, in introducing Terry Brennan, stole the show . . . Regardless of the criticism thrown his way in baseball season, the critics would miss Bob when they tuned in the Pirate games just as those who used to become annoyed with Rosey Rosewell miss him . . . Prince's popularity is clearly brought out by the many MC engagements he gets during the winter months . . . His next stop is at Washington, Pa., Monday for the western Class A Aconference fete.

San Francisco Favored to Win Playoff Berth

By UNITED PRESS

The San Francisco Forty-Niners are favored to win the National Football League Western Division title Sunday and grab a berth opposite the Cleveland Browns in the 1957 championship game

The Forty-Niners, tied with the Detroit Lions and Baltimore Colts for first place are whopping. 14½ point favorites for their home game with the crippled Green Bay Packers All three Western Division leaders end their regular seasons Sunday.

Detroit and Baltimore are underdogs in road games against rugged rivals. The Chicago Bears, who haven't lost to Detroit at home since 1953, entertain the Lions and are 2½ point favorites The Rams have won only one road game in the last two seasons but they are as hot as California sunshine in the Los Angeles Coliseum and are four-point choices to whip the Colts

No play-off games for the Western title will be needed if the oddsmakers are right But Detroit and Baltimore fans shouldn't lose hope, and San Francisco rooters shouldn't be too cocky Bettors who put their money on the favorites failed to collect in 34 of the 65 games played so far this season

The latest example of the fate that has befallen stout favorites this year came last Saturday when the Pittsburgh Steelers handed Cleveland the Eastern crown by upsetting the New York Giants 21-10 That result turned this Sunday's Giants-Browns clash at Yankee Stadium into just a championship warmup for Cleveland The Giants are four-point favorites.

In Sunday's other game, the Washington Redskins are seven-point choices to beat the visiting Steelers.

The weekend action begins Saturday afternoon when the Philadelphia Eagles play host to the Chicago Cardinals. The Eagles are favored by one point.

3 Memorials

In loving memory of our mother and grandmother, Mrs. Amelia Caterino, who died 25 years ago today December 14, 1932.
We live today with memories
Of days when you were here.

Throughout each day and year.

Soviet Forces UN into Long Session Today

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UP)—The Soviet Union and its Communist cohorts forced the United Nations into marathon session on "peaceful coexistence" today in an apparent effort to offset the opening of the NATO conference in Paris.

The general assembly's main political committee stayed in session until 2:16 a.m. est and when it adjourned for eight hours there still were 12 speakers left on the list.

Every one of the Communist bloc delegations gave long speeches, prompting one Western delegate to call it "a sort of a filibuster."

The United Nations was racing toward adjournment tonight but another matter that threatened to extend the session was the possibility of renewed debate on Communist Hungary.

Uruguay's Enrique Rodriguea Fabregat, a member of the five-nation special commission that turned in a scatching indictment of Russia's suppression of the 1956 Hungarian revolt, sought U.N. action to save revolutionary Gen. Pal Maleter and two other Freedom Fighters from death.

Maleter, popular hero of the revolt; Gen. Istvan Kovacs, and Sandor Kopacai, former Budapest police chief, were said in reports heard here to be on trial for their lives now.

Fabregat asked the help of the 20-nation Latin-American group and sought the aid of the United States in deciding the best course to help the Hungarian heroes.

The assembly's main political committee was dealing with its last item on the agenda —Russia's perennial demand for a "peaceful coexistence" declaration by all the world's countries.

Air Force to Build Missile Base in Maine

WASHINGTON (UP) — The Air Force will build a new base in Maine for the nation's first scheduled operational intercontinental missile capable of striking deep into Russia.

The Air Force said the 12-million-dollar facility would be built at the Presque Isle Air Force Base to handle its 5,000-mile Snark guided missile.

The service said it would begin acquiring additional land to start construction at Presque Isle next month.

The Snark, which is armed with nuclear warheads, is a pilotless bomber which travels through the atmosphere at speeds slower than that of sound.

About 50 of the "birds" have been test flown from the Cape Canaveral, Fla., missile test center and the last two were reported to have gone the full 5,000-mile length of the firing range. They landed in the South Atlantic only a few miles from the target center.

Room Service

SANTA ANA, Calif. (UP)—One of three juveniles who escaped from the second floor of Orange County jail Friday apparently was concerned about what would happen to his belongings which he had to leave behind. The youth took time out while sawing his way through bars and making a rope of mattress strips to write a note to jailers. It read: "Please send my stuff home. Thanks."

Kohler Labor Dispute to Be Part of Probe

WASHINGTON (UP)—Sen. Karl E. Mundt said today inquiry into the long and bitter Kohler Co., labor dispute in Kohler, Wis., is "only one facet" of the Senate Rackets Committee investigation of the United Auto Workers (UAW) Union.

The South Dakota Republican made the statement in a reply along with Rep. Carl T. Curtis (R-Neb.) to attacks on the committee Thursday at the AFL-CIO convention. Emil Mazey, UAW secretary-treasurer voiced some of the criticism from the convention floor.

The convention itself, meeting in Atlantic City, singled out GOP committee members Mundt, Curtis and Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) in a resolution criticizing the committee for indulging in headline hunting and showing anti-labor "bias.

Mundt said if the resolution was made because the three senators named feel that the UAW should be subjected to the "same thorough and careful investigation" which the committee is giving the Teamsters Union, why then the AFL-CIO is "right."

Big Mundt said he thinks the AFL-CIO is "wrong" if it believes other rackets committee members feel differently. He said the committee has received "many reports of improper activities" on the part of the UAW. He said the group plans an objective investigation as the only way to "affirm or invalidate" the reports.

Curtis said he is tired of having "a handful of union leaders slander and malign the committee wrongfully with the charge that we are tools of management and that it is a one-sided investigation." He said the union officials should give the committee information on specific acts of management wrongdoing if they know of any.

Lions to Sponsor Christmas Home Lighting Contest

The Fayette City Lions are cooperating with the West Penn Power Co. in promoting a Christmas residential lighting contest in the communities of Fayette City, Naomi, Brownstown and Gillespie.

The closing date for the contest has been set for Dec. 22 when the final judging will be made by a group appointed by the two sponsoring groups.

Four prizes will be awarded to the most outstanding homes. Paul Jesick, chairman, hopes that the residents will enter into the spirit with the thought of bringing pleasure and beauty during the holiday season. The prizes are on display at the Fayette City Hardware.

First prize is an electric coffee maker, electric fry pan, second; lamp third and fourth, radio.

The winners will be announced on December 23. No entry blank is necessary. For information on the contest Jesick, Richard Richardson or Don Stephens may be contacted. The cost and elaborateness of the display will not be considered as much as originality and ingenuity.

The Christmas spirit will be continued by the Lions when they hold their annual Christmas party on Thursday, Dec. 19 in the dining room of the Methodist Church. The committee for this affair includes Fred Weightman, Regis Mazinet and Ralph Miller.

A change has been made since the original plans were announced. The committee had planned to take gifts for the children at the Fayette County Childrens Home but early this week made a change in the plan and will ask the Lions to donate money to be used for playground equipment for the same home.

Methodist Church Board Plans Annual Party

At a Commission on Education meeting of the Fayette City Methodist Church, Friday Dec. 20 was the date set for the annual Christmas party of the Church School.

The affair will begin at 7 p.m. A program will preceed the visit from Santa Claus and the serving of refreshments by the Young Adult Class, Mrs. Samuel Miller, chairman.

Reports of classes were made to the president, Richard Richardson. The Rev. Harry W. Beveridge reported on the books that have been purchased by the commission for the purpose of starting a church library.

James Stathers was named treasurer to fill the vacancy left by the death of Mrs. Alfred Makepeace.

Girl Scouting Is Discussed at Meeting Here

The Fayette City Community Committee on Scouting met Tuesday evening in the American Legion home to discuss scouting for girls and a program for coming months.

With Mrs. George Moody, chairman, presiding, plans for reservations for weekend camp in June were made. Mrs. Moody announced that the area day camp was being discontinued by the Area Council.

A recent candy sale by the Scouts was reported most successful.

Scout troops, under the leadership of Laura Hines and Ethel Bailey, announced that the Christmas party would be held this evening at 6:30 with a gift exchange as a special feature of the party.

Mrs. Hines's troop met prior to the business meeting and demonstrated for the committee their work on Christmas corsages. The committee also reported that favors and nut cups had been made by several troops and sent to hospitalized veterans in area hospitals.

Woman's Society Holds Program For Christmas

The Woman's Society for Christian Service of the Methodist Church followed the outlined program, "You Are My Witnesses", at a meeting held Thursday evening in the church social rooms.

Mrs. Richard Auther, worship and program chairman, supervised the program that dealt with the March of Missions in Evangelism with a program of the Christmas season. Carol singing was enjoyed by the entire group.

A business meeting was held following the worship program. Reports on Christmas activities were given by Mrs. Wooda Brightwell and Mrs. Hindmarsh. Bumper strips were provided for cars by the spiritual life secretary. The strips are to remind motorist to "Keep Christ in Christmas."

Mrs. Clarence Young reported on the calendar project and Mrs. Clyde Wyatt reported additional figures for the Harvest Moon Festival.

Beck Jury Is Still Out; Takes Few Rest Hours

SEATTLE (UP)—A King County Superior Court jury of seven men and five women resumes deliberating the grand larceny case against Teamsters President Dave Beck today.

The jury deliberated six hours and 16 minutes Friday before retiring without reaching a verdict.

It was to resume deliberating at noon, e.s.t.

Beck, 63, is accused of putting into his own bank account $1,900 obtained from the sale of a Cadillac owned by the Western Conference of Teamsters.

The Teamsters boss admitted he authorized the sale of the car and that the money was placed in his private account. However, the defense contended the money was used by the union for contributing to political candidates.

Headache Result of Trying Too Hard to Make Things Perfect

By H. N. BUNDESEN, M. D.

A person who tries to be perfect in everything he does will very often find his reward is — headache.

I don't want you to use this as an excuse for not really trying in anything you do. But the fact is that those of you who work too hard to do too much are perfect candidates for migraines.

Migraine headaches are caused by a painful distension of the head's blood vessels. Often they are very severe and throbbing. In bad attacks, you may become ill and even vomit.

When they can begin any time, they usually start early in the morning. You might have one when you awake.

What can be done about them? As you know, I've always urged you to see your doctor when you are ill. This advice is just as applicable in a case of prolonged and repeated headaches.

Take It Easy

However, two out of every three persons with headaches can do a great deal toward helping themselves it they will only take things a bit easier, and not try to do everything just right.

A couple of aspirin or other headache remedies probably will give prompt relief. But that's only temporary help. You want to prevent these headaches from recurring.

To do that, you've got to change your attitude about a lot of things.

For one thing, don't insist on perfection in everything you do. Do your best, but don't try to work beyond your capacity.

Don't tackle too many jobs in one day. Believe it or not, most jobs can be done just as easily tomorrow.

Take time out to relax. I know you housewives have a lot of chores to do about the home. Nevertheless, try to set up a regular time for just sitting and resting.

One more thing. Try to accept people as they are. Don't expect too much from them — or yourself.

Question and Answer

P. J. N.: Are brain tumors curable?

Answer: If it is discovered early enough, and if proper treatment is instituted before it has progressed, brain tumor may be helped by surgery or X-ray.

What Become of Big Quiz Show Winners

By FRED DANZIG

NEW YORK (UP)—What would you do if you became one of those TV - created American folk heroes known as quiz show big money winners?

If the past is any guide, chances are you'd spent the loot wisely or not at all.

Up-dating the doings of the brainy bankbusters, we find that Charles Van Doren, who left "Twenty One" with $129,000, now has a wife, a more sumptuous apartment in Manhattan, a $50,-000-a-year contract with NBC as a consultant on educational programming, and is writing a book He still teaches literature at Columbia, where his salary was raised $100 to $4,500.

Policeman Lectures

The first winner on $64,000 Question," New York patrolman Redmond O'Hanlon, a Shakespeare expert, used part of his $16,000 to enlarge his home and buy a station wagon. He retires from the force in eight years and then plans to become a college professor. Since winning in June, 1955, O'Hanlon has in his spare time delivered lectures and written a book on The Bard.

Showgirl Barbara Hall, another Shakespearean authority, banked her $64,000 winnings. She is now rehearsing for her first part in a "legit" Broadway production.

Marine Capt. Richard McCutcheon, a cooking expert and the first top winner on $64,000 Question, resigned from the Marines last August to join an Ohio tool manufacturing firm. He bought a home at Galion, Ohio, and set up a fund for his children.

Gino Prato, the opera - loving New York shoemaker who won $32,000 on "Question," financed his daughter's wedding and a family visit to Italy. He returned to a $10,000-a-year job as "good-will ambassador" for a manufacturer of heels.

From Hollywood—

Ameche Has Right To Hate Telephones

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UP)—If anyone has a right to hate telephones it's Don Ameche.

For the past 18 years his life has been one long party line with the joke on him.

Back in 1939 the mustachioed actor innocently accepted the title role in "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell," a characterization that changed his life. Since then his name has become synonymous with the telephone.

Strangely, though, Don holds no grudge against Mr. Bell's contraption.

Loretta, Fonda Forgotten

"I had no idea I would become so closely identified with the part," Ameche sighed. "But I'd have made the picture even if I had known. At least people remember me for it. They forget Loretta Young and Henry Fonda also were in the movie."

A restaurant telephone jangled nearby and Don recoiled.

He explained that comedian Fred Allen started the long-standing joke (Formula: Ameche plus 'phone minus Alexander Graham Bell equals laughs) on his radio show.

"Fred clowned around with the gag for 19 straight weeks," Ameche grinned. "He had a new twist every week. I got a big kick out of it myself. I knew Fred well, and he wasn't unkind about it.

"Then other comedians picked up the Ameche-telephone jokes. They're still going strong.

"The jokes became a national institution when the story was printed about the school teacher asking a pupil, 'Who invented the telephone,' and the kid replied, 'Don Ameche.'

GIs Keep Ball Rolling

"Servicemen kept the ball rolling during the war when they called 'phones 'Ameches.'"

Don, who stars in "Junior Miss" Friday night on CBS-TV's "Du Pont Show of the Month," hesitated when asked if he feels the telephone humor has hurt his career. For a moment he looked as if he heard bells ringing.

"I don't think so," he said slowly, "But I could be wrong."

Now a resident of New York, the actor works spasmodically in television. He spends his free time walking Manhattan's streets searching for paintings in art shops

"I walk as much as six miles a day," he said. "I'm often stopped by passersby or cab drivers who want to make jokes about how I invented the telephone. They're always good - natured and I don't resent the laughs.'

Be that as it may, when Don rose to leave he had a look in his eye that seemed to say, "Don't call me. I'll call you."

12 Boys Held In Robberies

WASHINGTON, Pa. (UP) — Twelve boys were held in custody of Washington County juvenile authoritics today for a series of robberies in the Cecil-Canonsburg-Washington area dating to 1956.

State troopers arrested four boys Thursday night as suspects in an $80 robbery at the Hill Station Champion Store last Oct. 20.

The four implicated eight others who were taken into custody Friday. The troopers said they have recovered $350 in jewelry taken in Washington County robberies.

Police said the boys have admitted stealing from several grocery stores, super markets, an appliance store, a beer truck, a tavern, and homes.

FOR YOUR Cheerier Christmas

This table-top is made of live corsages, each rose tied with a bow of white ribbon, its stem inserted in a miniature water tube.

Candles, carnations, evergreens, ornaments are set in a base of styrofoam.

Triangular arrangement of cedar, pine cones and dramatic Fuji mums is designed for the mood of the modern house or apartment.

Flowers Bring Christmas Feeling Into Home; Here Are 16 New Ideas

Flowers bring the "feeling" of Christmas into your home. What's more, these colorful floral settings express your artistic originality, complete your savory cuisine and add to the festive atmosphere of the gay season.

There are three types of designs or arrangements: modern, which includes line, crescent and curving arrangements; traditional, for massed or Colonial designs, and the Oriental or symbolic kind—the highest point meaning heaven, the middle signifying height of man, and the lowest representing earth.

To help you with ideas for your own home or apartment, the following 16 new ideas are presented:

1. Try making a striking arrangement of flowering cotton branches contrasted with dark green rhododendron leaves. To carry out the "Nativity" theme, place the little creche figures in front. Add a large red candle to the setting in a styrofoam base as your symbolic Christmas light.

2. On a gleaming mirror base, combine a spruce and pine mixture with bright red berries and dramatically curved branches sprayed with white flocking. Among these, place your figure of Virgin and Child. Add three Christmas candles in the background and display the whole arrangement as your sign of welcome on your hallway table.

3. Around the base of a small table-size evergreen tree, place poinsettias and red- and white painted cones. For a sparkling finish, add small red ornaments to the tree.

4. White poinsettias arranged around a red candle, or vice versa, are effective. Small white bells may be attached to candle.

5. Red poinsettias with flocked evergreen and holly in low green glass bowl. Tiny bubbles in the glass give a vertical-striped effect to the bowl. Use red, green and bronze Christmas tree ornaments about base, and red ribbon bow attached to greenery in the arrangement.

6. Rose-marked caladium leaves with poinsettias in a modern white pillow container.

7. Red poinsettias and red anthuriums in low, modern, black container. Gild evergreen sprays for foliage accent and tie gold bow on one of them For figurine, use one especially designed for Christmas decoration.

8. White carnations, gilt pine cones and variegated holly in bronze container, with snow family candles.

9. Red carnations, pine and candy canes criss-crossing in middle of arrangement; a red ribbon bow may hold the candy canes together.

10. Red roses, white mums and frosty candle in low container; red and gold ornaments add brilliance.

11. Poinsettias with red berries, flocked leaves and holly sprigs in container inserted into Santa Claus sleigh pulled by reindeer. Red tapers are placed in arrangement and sparkling artificial snow sprinkled over setting.

12. Santa Claus boots with white mums and holly.

13. Miniature tree decorated with white gardenias or red and white camellias, underneath which is a skating scene (mirror, bits of sparkly cotton around the edge and ice skating figures).

14. For a modern spartment or home—mount a square green candle on a plain brass tray. Arrange sprays of spruce or pine to reach two-thirds of the way up the candle. Then blend in clusters of white pompoms. Surround the base of the candle with a cluster of chartreuse Christmas tree ornaments.

15. Textured dried materials, such as thistles, drittwood and seed pods, when used alone, take on a special Christmas glow with a generous dusting of silver and gold. They give a heartwarming contrast to the deep-toned woods of traditional furniture.

16. Red poinsettia plant combined with lush branches of pine. To this add a rich cluster of white tuberoses to contrast handsomely with the dark brown of paneled walls.

Other tips? Don't mix too many fragrances in a bouquet and keep colors down to about three. Group your colors instead of spotting them throughout your flower display. There should be no crossing of leaves or stems.

16 Known Species Of Wood in U. S.

There are sixteen known species of wood native to the U. S. which even when oven dry, have a specific gravity of over 1.0, which means they will not float in water.

Some butt logs of west coast hemlock have so much water in them they sink, but when dried they make one of the nation's most attractive and lighter weight lumber.

Section of Garage For Hobby Workshop

The family car is being "moved over" in many garages to make room for dad's do-it-yourself workshop.

Some handymen who are "long on enthusiasm but short on workshop space," especially those who live in homes without a basement or other suitable location such as a family room, are finding the garage a perfect place for their activities.

'Most newer homes, and many older ones, too, are built with more garage area than is required for the average family car. This leaves ample free space for a work bench along either the side or end wall," says Ralph Sherwin, chief designer of Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co.

To insure the optimum in pleasant working condition Sherwin advises putting the work bench under a large window to get the maximum possible amount of natural light.

"Ample daylight is the best and most relaxing form of illumination as it reduces unnecessary eye-strain," he said.

"Glazed with either high quality window glass or Thermopane insulating glass for added all-weather comfort, the window becomes an ideal focal point around which the entire, compact work shop can be built."

The secret of the economy in this arrangement is the use of existing facilities. In may cases the garage is heated by an outlet from the house furnace, providing comfort while working on those projects which have been reserved for the cool weather. Small power tools can be wired to the existing electrical circuit with a minimum of alteration, while cupboards for hand tool storage can be conveniently located on either side of the window.

A two-car garage with only one side in use, can be turned into a spacious work room by separating the two areas with a patterned glass partiton. Unlike an opaque wall, the patterned glass screen effectively divides the garage into car storage and work sections without stopping the passage of light from one part to the other.

Trees Grow to Gigantic Size

From British Columbia to San Francisco, along the rain-blessed Pacific slope, trees grow to gigantic size. Some Douglas fir trees may contain 50,000 board feet of lumber, enough to build five small homes.

West coast hemlock and western red cedar trees grow nearly as large, some 275 feet tall, twelve foot in diameter. Few reach this huge size because insects, disease and fire take their toll. Under managed forestry, most trees are harvested at about 100 years of age.
